Protest fast for Welsh language

From Tim Jones Llangefui

Members of the Welsh Language Society will start a week-long fast on the National Eisteddfod field at Llangefni, Gwynedd, today as part of a campaign for an official body to oversee the universal teaching of the tongue in Wales.
The fast, to be followed by a

280-mile march to Cardiff, is tolerated but not welcomed by the organizers of the festival. The society has succeeded for years in frustrating Eis-teddiod officials by diverting attention away from the event's essential cultural and literary purpose. The latest demonstration comes after warnings by the festival's ruling body that it will clamp down on activities that seem hostile to Wales's annual cultural showpiece. Mr Wyn Roberts, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Wales, was beckled by about 40 society members when he opened a mobile theatre on Saturday.

He said: "I' welcome all opinions and suggestions but it is fair that I should expect constructive ideas and tolerant respect for all views."

He rejected any element of compulsion in the promotion of the Welsh language and said all concerned with its future should dedicate themselves to protest veciferously, expecting others to undertake the practi cal work necessary to realize Welsh language aims and ambitions.

"That is the only way to promote the language and keep the goodwill necessary to ensure its survival," he said.

Liberal leader's health

Friends say Steel is improving

Mr David Steel, the leader, has been suffering from severe depression brought on by a viral, infection apparently picked up during the last week of the general election camshould be in bed.

But, according to Mr Steel's close friends, the worst is past, he has been feeling much better recently and intends to return to active politics during the Liberal Assembly next month, making his keynote speech on September 24.

The fresh insight on Mr Steel's decision in July to take a break from the leadership of his party came at the weekend after he received the results of medical tests carried out in London last week.

Mr Steel has been told by his doctors that the virus usually lasts about two-and-a-half months and can can be treated only by rest. Although he went to Penrith three times during the by-election campaign, Mr.

Then he apparently contrac-ted the viral infection which made him constantly feel tired and depressed. It also heightened the disenchantment he was feeling at the continued criticism from elements within his party over his style of leadership, which some have labelled "autocratic," and at opposition by some of them to the party's relationship with the Social Democrats.

His irritation on those issues will clearly not end with his recovery, but the result at Penrith, which has been seen as further vindication for Mr. Steel's concept of the closest possible working relationship between the two parties, will have come as a tonic. So too will be the early results from the questionnaires sent to all Liberal associations after the More than 200 have been

Irish cleric's dream for airport stalls

On a boggy plateau 650ft above the sea, the second Miracle of Knock is approach-ing a crucial period in its development.

Hailed as the finest achievement of a West of Ireland cleric, portrayed as a typical Irish story hut dismissed as "Knock nonsense" by its critics, the 6.000ft ashphalt runway of the republic's fourth international airport is near completion. The project has swallowed almost IRE9m of government money which has been channelled into a private company headed by Monsignor James Horan, the astute parish priest of Knock, population 500.

Soon the Government of Dr Garret FitzGerald, will have to lecide wbether a minimum of lR£4m or maximum lR£8m would be given to complete the grandly-titled Connacht re-gional airport. The money is needed to construct a terminal huilding and provide air traffic control, lighting, security and customs facilities so that the airport a few miles from the Marian Shrine at Knock in Mayo can open in 1985.

The indications are that no more public money will be poured into the plan and that the promoters will be asked to find private capital willing to risk investing in a project which the chief executive of Acr Rianta, which runs Ireland's three other international air-ports, has said is not a realistic financial proposition.

But Mgr Horan, who first persuaded Mr Charles Haughey, when he was prime minister, to support the idea says: "We will get our money. They will give it to us as you cannot leave a project like this half finished." The site is a few miles from gers annually operates at a loss. the shrine where in 1879 it is claimed there was an apparition of the Virgin Mary. Mgr Horan put up Ict. 100 for the project.

In a reference to the ten-year-old campaign of attacks by Armenian underground organi-zations against Turkish diplo-mats, missions and offices abroad in which 37 Turks have been killed President Evren noted that we did not start this current war, just as it was not us who had started the war with the Armenians in 1915. But they will again see their designs frustrated at the end of this war, as was the case then."

He called on those "who brainwash poor Armenian youths with distorted facts and arm them" to shandon their futile hopes; and he called on Armenian youths to see the realities and stop being taken in by the theories of their mentors. Finally he called on those countries that had tolerated the terrorist acts to start "an effective struggle against terrorism which threatens to become scourge for the whole world".

He accused the surviving members of suppressed Turkish extremist organizations of having entered a treacherous alliance with the Armenian terrorists.

Racketeers lead Australia into a US-style underworld

In the first of two articles on crime in Australia, TONY DUBOUDIN, Melbourne Correspondent, reports the latest findings on organized racketeer-

Two reports within 10 days indicating that crime in Austra-lia has gained the upper hand and that the country is heading towards an American style underworld have shocked many people.

The first report, by Mr
Douglas Meagher, QC, semior

Some of its findings have been kept secret, while further investigations and criminal pros-

It is these wide powers and the possibility that a national crime commission would be given even wider-ranging power which has caused concern over civil liberties.

In his report Mr Meagher says that investigations with the royal commission can now identify many of the organizations controlling crime in Australia. At least three of the crime syndicates measure their cash flow in tens of millions of dollars. The bigger organizations are involved in many types of crime ranging from starting price (SP) bookmaking and pornography to prostitution and

The report says that close relations have been found to exist between some Australian criminals and the families of some people "high in the Filipino Government". It also says that Hongkong has become the financial centre for a "very large number of Australian

Mr Meagher sounded an alarm with regard to the law enforcement agencies where he said that although corruption had not reached epidemic proportions, organized crime had achieved some success. The syndicates took every opporminity to promote corruption and it was only a matter of time before attempts were made to corrupt senior judges.

Reforms to Hongkong parliament' welcomed

From Richard Hughes Horgkong

Chinese and expatriate members of Hongkong's Legislative Council have applauded last week's radical changes and reforms in constitutional procedures.

After nine months of study under Governor Sir Edward Youde's instructions, pro-cedures will be streamlined and the Council's discussions will be more open to the public.

The constitutional changes coincide with the discussions between Peking and London on the future of Hongkong after 1997. They are likely to strengthen Hongkong's insistence on local autonomy and persistence with non-Marxist hard life, trade, liberry and the pursuit of capitalism".

Reagan may take more flexible approach after gesture by Castro

The Reagan Administration, faced with a hostile House and growing doubts about the impact of United States-backed guerrillas in Nicaragua, is showing distinct signs of flexihility in its Central America policy.
President Reagan was expecially receptive to a conciliatory interview given in Havana hy Mr Fidel Castro and hroadcast by United States television networks. The Cuban Leader said he was willing to support an agreement by all countries in the area which barred armed shipments from one state to another and required the withdrawal from Central America of all foreign adviisers.

Mr Reagan greeted the highly visible - and uncharacteristic -gesture y giving Mr Castro the benefit of the doubt in any negotiations and so forth." He felt there was a new openness to negotiations on Cuba's part and that resulted from the United States show of (military) strength in the region.

He added: "We will take the lead and we have said: 'Yes, we would like a negotiated settle-ment and a peace.' If he is really serious about this, I think it's Tehran radio did not make clear on which side of the frontier the three border heights lay. But a communique an-nouncing the capture of the first two suggested they were in Iranian territory. It said they had been in Iraqi hands since the start of the Gulf War in September 1980, when Iraqi forces invaded Iran.

The Communiqué said Iranian forces had also recaptured the Iranian border post of Farrokhabad, taken an Iraqi post at Dorraji and now controlled the road south on the Iranian side of the border lowards the town of Dehloran. Opera: John Higgins reviews Siegfried at Bayreuth

British fidelity to Wagner's instructions

In an age much concerned with musical Fafner's premises are in a danker part authenticity, whether of scores or of the forest, but they do come with a authenticity, whether of scores or instruments, why should there not be an equal reverence for original stage directions? That is the question clearly posed by the Hall-Dudley Ring after its third evening at Bayreuth. In turning the Ring back into a fairy-tale of gods and beroes, villains and dragons, forests and rivers, they have followed Wagner's instructions to the letter in all but a haodful of instances, the most nntable being the absence of a borse to carry off Brunnhilde and Sieglinde at the end of the second act of Walkire And, since Bayreuth is actoriously unwilling to accept the first version of any oew production as also being the last, that horse could well be there when the Ring returns next year.

So, for the first two acts of Stegfried. William Dudley has provided a pair of highly realistic sets. Mime, like Fafner, lives in a cave with a fine view of the trees through the entrance. Clearly be is in a better way of business then most Mimes, to judge from the size of the furnace and bellows, and rarely have the techical details of work to the smithy been so carefully delineated.

Anthony Hopkins, playing John Strickland, has never looked more pained. His whole acting career, going from pin-nacle to pinnacle of agony, led private watering bole and there is every reason for the dragoo to feel irritation when Siegfried starts paddling in it. It could easily serve for the Wulf's Glen in Freischütz until Fafner and Mime are slain and the gloomy, dripping trees are transformed into summer green, to one of the most magical lighting changes seen so far, as Siegfried follows the Waterbird's call.

Siegfried opened oot only with a new tenor in the title role (Manfred Jung for Reiner Goldberg, who left at the dress rehearsal) but a stand-in Wotan as well. Signiund Nimsgera cancelled because of a throat infection a couple of bours before the performance and Bent Nortip took over. So with only Mime and a backstage bear left of the original cast Bayreuth was not exactly fielding the first team.

Parts of the audience were unsympathetic to these substitutions: Jung carefully bolding himself back for later in the evening and Norup firm enough of voice but articulating poorly as Wotau. Peter Haage as the grimy, hunch-backed Mime, ooe of Germany's new crop of actor-singers, was the clear star. In Act II Jung allowed a little more of Siegfried to show through, the uncontrolled adolescent who grows up by the all-too-human way of killing (Fafner and Mime), listening (tn the Woodbird) and finally loving (Brunn-

Fafner is a magnificent monster, scaly, spiky, with flashing eyes and only just missing with the gobbet of vector spat at Siegiried. The battle, with Dieter Schweikart's amplified bass sounding at its best, is carefully wrapped to gloom and looks too oce-sided, but Fafner's head gives a supreme phaltic rear before falling into final detumescence as Siegfried announces his oame. It is a mistake, though, for Siegfried to throw the dead Mime into the Fafner could before cruffing him. the Fafaer-pond before stuffing him into the cave. Sylvia Greenberg's Woodbird could have sounded lighter and more airborne.

Aod so, via Erda, a young aod sexysounding Anne Gjevange, a singer very much to be watched, to Brunnhilde's mountain retreat. The top slice of the Dudley sandwich reappears through the skies, completing a full trajectory backstage to front with the sleeping Brunnhilde presumably strapped no upside down at the start of the flight Siegfried's cry "Das ist keio Mann" usually gets a laugh, but it has rarely been more apposite. Hildegard Behrens is the most feminine of Brunnhildes and she has changed from the St Joan of Walkure to a young girl entranced by a golden boy. Behrens for the last section of the opera unleashed a stream of burnished tone. Jung, well aware of the competitioo nn stage, had saved himself for these muments and gave Siegfried some beroic sound. Sher's dazzling villainy

Tartuffe

The Pit

The assumption behind Bill Alexander's ferociously brilliant production is that Tartuffe is much too serious and alarming work to be insulated behice any English equivalent of Freoch classical style.

The greatest compliment I can bestow on 'Christopher Hamptoo's translation is that unlike the virtuoso versions of Tony Harrison and Richard Wilbur - you hardly notice it. Plain, perfectly phrased blank verse does the job; and when there is a quotable line, such as Tartuffe's solemn announcement that forgiveness is "just not oo" from God's point of view, it is there simply to illuminate character. Nothing ge's between the spectator and the sight of a sensible man betraying bis family, in the false convicting that he is obeying

Pride and obsticacy evidently ruo in Organ's family, and the production powerfully underscores the main plot with the early squabble between foolishly estranged lovers, hauled back together by Stephanie Fayerman's masterfully funny The central relatiooship verges on nightmare. You get the flavour of it long before Tartuffe himself arrives from Orgon's treatment of the family. Nigel Hawthorne retains all the external marks of his former self so as to intensify the sense of its absence. Never does he sound more indifferent than when he uses terms of endearment; and, as he rebounds between ingratitation and rage, the comedy takes on the quality of a fatal

When he finally recognizes his error with Alison Steadman's Elmire, there is no comedy at all, only heartbreak. Recreated from within, Haw-thorne's Orgon remains io

There is, however, no traditional image for Tartuffe, and the main shocks of the evening begin with the arrival of Antony Sher as a lank-haired imp in a bedraggled grey habit, ac-companied by an identical double (the normally unseen valet, Laurent).

Together they share a conspiratorial relationship, convey-ing the private side of Tartuffe that Molière omitted to supply Sher's performance is one of dazzling Mephistopbelian villainy: passing from lethery to piety io a single breath. achieving his first victory over his enemies by simulating the signs of the stigmata, and executing spell-binding changes from sanctimonious benevolcnce to the appetite of a succubus with the aid of an obscene flickering tongue. Kate Kelly's Road Show

Chester

Edward Cowie's opera Kelly is due at Covent Garden in 1986; it has already produced a which the most substantial, Kate Kelly's Road Show, was premiered in the course of the enterprising Chester Festival. So that we become familiar with the story of the Australian outlaw. Ned Kelly, Cowie has laid it nut clearly in this onewoman monodrama, based on the travelling show which Kelly's sister Kate devised after he was executed in 1880.

lo nine episodes, Kate tells of the family's hard life, Ned's violeot tendencies, his struggles with the authorities and his final fate. The stories are dramatic enough, but it takes every ounce of Fiona Kimm's resourcefulness - which is considerable - to make them work oo stage. She stamps, gestures, glares, studies the players oext to her. But because she has no oolookers to react to her tales - presumably that will be different in the final opera - nothing really happens.

Uotil the final moments, that is, when Cowie disrupts the roadshow with an outburst from a planted audience member, dennuncing Kate's wicked exploitation of your brother's infamy and shame". She collapses - "If this be so, I'm finished" - and the final evocative passage depicts her suicide by drowning.

To accompany this tale.

Cowie has assembled a sort of Australian Soldier's Tale band, including accordion, bar piano and a buzzing jew's harp. Uolike some of Cowie's largescale scores, the textures here are crisp and well-defined, with effective use of folksong material, though much of the writing seems at first hearing to be dependent oo generalized effects rather than precise pitch material. The vocal line, however, is strongly profiled, re-markably singable and unusually intelligible. E. J. Craddock is a painter himself on the a sister preening itself to the Linda Ormistoo and particu-

The story, already filtered through La Fontsine and the libretists Barbier and Carre, changes Boccaccio's falcon into a dove to please the French sensibility; and Buxton continues the tradition, with Snoo Wilson translating and freely rewriting lyrics and dialogue, sharpening further the abrasive humour and self-regard which transmutes the original, darker and more poignant tale. John Byrne, designing, has set the action (if such it can be

Indeed, it is such a convinc-iog piece of theatre that, particularly in Act I, where arias seem ever fewer and farther between, Gounod risks being the loser. A riveting performance could have justified the piece's return, but - perhaps the heat was at work agaio - Elisabeth Leonskaja gave a splashy, vigorous but uncontrolled reading, full of bumps.

We have come to expect bright, imaginative planning from the Nash Ensemble, but in Saturday's programme they (perhaps with the help of the BBC) surpassed themselves. Czech and Russian chamber works rubbed shoulders, with the clever link of jazz between the jangling, cimbalom-dominated texture of Stravinsky's Ragtime and the piano vampings of Martinu's La Revue de

In the effort to project the small-scale music in the Albert Hall there was a little streouous nver-blowing from the wind in the evening's two subtlest pieces, Janacek's spicy oldman's hymo to youth, Alladi (which was however crisply articulated), and Dvorak's glori-ously relaxed Serenade in D minor. But the scamperings of the trio in the Dynrak minuet were beautifully done, and the ensemble's hard edge returned in a spleodidly pungent finale: Stravinsky's Renard, wisely done in English, strongly projected by the singers, and firmly conducted by Liooel Friend.

his victims ringing in his ears . . . Stories like these would once have convulsed us with borror. Today they are commonplace. This chilling selection came from a cursory glance through just one week's newspapers: some were reported in a single paragraph. We have become desensitized to violence.

We accept that violent crime -brutal, unprovoked, often unmoti-vated - is a fact of life in western society today. More and more its victims are those unable to protect themselves: women, old people, the physically handicapped, children and babies.

Just as disturbingly, the assailants are becoming younger all the time. In the 25 years from 1952 to 1977, the rate of arrest in the United States for murder, assault, rape and man-slaughter doubled among the 15 to 25 age group and trebled among those aged between 15 and 17. But it increased six-fold among children under 15. in London last year there were over 1,600 attacks on bus drivers and conductors: most of them by schoolchildren.

What turns ordinary people into violeot criminals? Why do children become vandals and sadistic brutes?

There is endless debate about the causes, covering a wide range of psychological and social factors such as unemployment, poverty, inner-city tensions, racial problems, disadvantage and deprivation, too much violence on TV and video nasties. And the solutions discussed range from harsher jail sentences to a taste of military discipline. But in all the discussions, one factor is seldom, if ever, considered: diet.

Could there be a connexion between poor diet and anti-social behaviour? Could eating the wrong food help turn children into hooligans? Most people would dismiss the idea as far-fetched, but over the years evidence that this could actually be the case has been steadily accumulating.

Late twentieth century diet is a disaster for millions in the West, especially among the poor and their children. For many of them, the staple of their diet is highly refined carbohydrate - white sugar and white flour, both stripped of so many vitamins and other important nutrients. Other serious nutrient losses occur when food is canned, frozen and processed. Thousands of chemical additives are poured into the products, of which few are tested for their effect on the central nervous system and never in combination. Fruit and vegetables are polluted by residues of pesticides and fungicides oever meant for human consumption; fish is contaminated with toxic metal wastes accumulating in the world's oceans; meat and chicken by drugs added to animal feeds; lead - a potent poison - is building up in our environment. Researchers have looked for possible links between these factors and the growth in violent crime, but in the past two or three years they have concentrated increasingly on just one area: hypoglycaemia, or low blood sugar. And the arch-criminal of the piece may

It is one of our basic foodstuffs. enjoyed the world over in a million different forms. But research in America now suggests that sugar has a darker side, one that can turn an apparently normal person into a violent criminal. The research has produced evidence that sugar, and diet in general, can change behaviour patterns in humans. And it has started a new train of thought on how to well turn out to be sugar, that pure, white and deadly substance which the world consumes in ever-growing quan-

deal with offenders

Whole foods eaten in a healthy diet are slowly broken down into glucose in the bloodstream, and the excess is stored in the liver as glycogen, the process being delicately monitored by hormones. The efficient function of the brain, which uses up more than 25 per cent of the body's glucose supplies, depends on the maintenance of those creams and fizzy drinks. levels of glucose, or blood sugar.

hydrate, converted so quickly into glucose that the blood sugar level rocks. The pancreas pours out insulin to bring the level plunging down again; and in turn the adrenal glands respond by releasing epinephrine as a signal to the liver to pour out more blood sugar, thus raising the level again.

These sudden drops in blood sugar evoke the condition known as hypoglycaemia, in which messages from the brain controlling mood, motivation and learning are perpetually disrupted. The result may be a sudden burst of temper, aggression, anti-social behaviour, as well as depression, changes of mood, confusion, fatigue and irritability. Caffeine, alcohol, smoking, and exposure to allergens can all trigger this unbalancing of the body chemistry, but nothing triggers it faster, or more predictably, than sugar. Significantly, the rise in sugar consumption has exactly paralleled the rise in violent crime: today we eat something like 51/2 tablespoons of sugar

At first he was consumed in biscuits, cakes, puddings, soft drinks, breakfast cereals, sweet pickle and even canned vegetables. The average American gets through 128 pounds of sugar a year, but children consume much more than adults with their sweets, chocolate, ice-

Interest in the sugar-crime hypothesis was beightened by a study in trefined sugar - sucrose is America in 1975, which found that 85 concentrated carbo- per cent of offenders checked were found to have low blood sugar. A separate study in America in 1980 showed that a large percentage of iuvenile delinquents tested were found to be eating more than 400 pounds of sugar a year in various forms.

One of the most energetic researchers into the diet-crime link is Alexander Schauss, a former probation officer in the United States. While helping heroin junkies in Harlem in the 1960s, he noticed that those eating a healthy diet found it far easier to kick the drug habit than those living on high sugar "junk" food. And while working with the South Dakota youth service, he found that those group homes with a better record of rehabilitation were the ones providing the juveniles with a better diet. In one home, the inmates had their own vegetable garden and were not allowed sugar, coffee or tea. They ate only "wholesome" food. Juveniles there stayed for an average of only three months, compared to a State average of 18 months.

In the late 1970s, Schauss set up the American Institute for Biosocial Reregarded by orthodox social workers. doctors and nutritionists as something of a quack.

"I found that my colleagues in the criminal justice system were ready to be interested to be open-minded, he said. The resistance came from the medical establishment. I suggested to them over and over again that our investigation."

His argument was successful, and today Schauss is increasingly consulted by those dealing with young offenders. He has orchestrated research programmes, lectured worldwide, and has trained thousands of social workers to initiate and carry out similar programmes.

In 1977, a US Scnate Select Committee on nutrition and human needs heard an Ohio probation officer. Mrs Barbara Reed, testify to her auccess in treating offenders by diet. The offenders were tested for hypoglycaemia with a written questionnaire. She found that a high proportion of the information, to education. There have people she questioned not only appeared to be hypoglycaemic, but studies — and not one of them has responded remarkably well to being failed to show substantial positive placed on a diet to correct the results." condition: no sugar, coffee, alcohol, sweets or processed food containing additives. By 1975 one of the judges, was already instructing defendants: "Mrs Reed is going to put you on a diet, and you will stay on it or you will go to jail because you will be back introuble if you go off it". She said that out of 252 offenders who had stayed on her diet, not one had returned to court.

Among those impressed by her testimony were the directors of the US Naval Correctional Centre in Seattle, who decided to cross off white sugar and white flour from the menu. A year later they reported that there was a reduction in sickness, a reduction in medications needed, and a 12 per cent reduction in disciplinary reports.

But the strongest evidence yet of a link between crime and diet is contained in the results of a two-year study set up by Stephen Schoenthaler, Professor of Criminology at California State University.

he study involved 276 chronic young offenders aged between 12 and 18 living in a Virginia correction centre. Only a few of the staff, and none of the subjects knew that they were acting as guines pigs. They were led to believe that the vanishing soft drinks machine. and the disappearance of their favour-ite ice-creams, puddings, cookies -even the sugar bowls on the tables was purely for health reasons at the whim of their director, who was known to be a keen vegetarian. The results were startling. The number of well-behaved juveniles jumped by 71 per cent; the number of chronic offenders went down by 50 per cent, and the incidence of anti-social behaviour fell by an average of 47 per

And the evidence is finally beginning to impress Under Alexander Schauss's direction, the Institute for Biosocial Research launched 95 programmes in the USA and elsewhere, with intensive training courses for the professionals involved.

"It has taken 13 years to set it all up"
Schauss says, "and we're unwilling to hand it over as a complete technological package complete with all the information, unless we feel it's going to be handled properly. The first thing that has to be done is to get all professional people interested and informed about it. The state in the forefront of the research is Alabama. For eight solid working days we trained their entire social services staff, right from the top man down. "They had to remodel their own lifestyles at the same time: you can't impress on children the necessity of giving up treats if they see their teachers drinking cokes and smoking all the time."

A month ago, Schauss lectured on science was too immature at this time his work to a symposium on interto make judgments about whether or national nutrition at Surfers' Paradise not our approach was scientifically. in Queensland, Australia. Schlauss, however, is careful to emphasise the limitations of his work. don't know anyone here who regards diet as a panacea: and certainly nobody here believes that crime is caused by poor diet; it's one of many factors. But the more severe a person's behavioural problems, the more likely he is to have physiological problems too: what we have begun to realise is that when a person is placed on a good diet, at least it gives him or her the chemistry to respond to direction, been a lot of programmes, a lot of else. I should have known this before I started, when I asked an inhabitant of Southwold how to get to Kings Lynn. "God knows", he said. He'd never met anyone before who wanted to go there. Probably there never had been anyone. Anyway. found myself wandering down a lot of brown B roads where I made my second interesting observation on East Anglia; East Anglian petrol is totally different once you get off the main road.

Jet, Total, Fina and BP may dominate the A roads, like the Soviet forces in Afghanistan, but once into the back lanes you find the guerrilla petrols taking over. Phoenix, Anglo, Freedom, Valiant, Little David — they all sound like Saxon remnants occupying the countryside where the big boys daren't go. And no doubt giving the locals the amazing power of motoring at 29 mph. Thanks to Valiant, everyone now waves to me as 1 pass. Valiant, the friendly pearol. And the third discovery is that the staple crop of East Anglia is not corn, mustard or broad heaves.

broad beans, it is festivals. No town is too small, so church too crumbly, to house festival. Like jam in Alice in Wonderland, they are all last week or next week, but nevertheless from every field leans a sign promising a festival. Even villages which are too poor to have a festival can put up a sign saying that they had one last week.

In very low-lying areas: such as Beccles. the festivals turn into regattas, and in some places they have carnivals, but carnivals are only festivals without a string quartet. la fact, the five grades of festival can be determined in terms of a quartet.

1. Top festivals, with a top string quarter. 2. Rising festivals, with a string quartet which is going to be very famous very soon, even though it is now quite unknown. 3. Small festivals with a quartet from the far side of the county - the Suffolk Youth sideways the British way of life

Here's what Lytton Strackey, the naughty girl, was doing in the National Gallery in June 1930.

There was a black-haired tart marching around in india-rubber boots, and longing to be picked in. We both lingered in the strangest manner in front of various masterpieces - wandering from room to room. Then on looking round I perceived a more attractive tart - fair-haired this time - a pink face and plenty of vitality. So I transferred my attentions, and began to move in his direction when on looking more closely I observed that it was the Prince of Wales - no doubt at all - a custodian bowing and scraping, and Philip

There must be hundreds of equally juicy anecdotes told in the privacy of museum staffrooms where the attendants put their feet np for a few minutes' tea-break. But museum attendants are frustratingly discreet: they take a pride in their good relations with the public, and are ever alert to any breach in that vast amorphous abstract,

On duty, they talk to each other like people at a grand cocktail party, constantly glancing over each other's shoulders to see if somebody more important has come in. In the National Gallery, they are provided with chairs, and are required to wear ties; not many hats. In the Natural History Museum, no chairs or ties, all hatted. In the V&A, hats on, ties off (but in the pocket in case the chief warder changes his mind), and very uncomfortable-looking high stools. The uniform of many attendants also displays a short length of chrome-plated chain, on the end of which is a whistle. This jailer image was empasized as I watched an attendant with a longer bit of chain than usual, patrolling a room full of musical instruments. Every now and then he peered suspiciously into one of the cases, as if to make sure that the sixteenth-century zither imprisoned there was not going to make a desperate bid for freedom.

He was probably just reading the labels. Unless the museum is very small, an attendant cannot relax if there are no visitors. He can't sit down and read a book. The rooms they work in can be very warm in summer, and bitterly cold in winter. "You can't help but learn". I was told. "Often there's nothing to do but walk up and down and look at the exhibits."

This is why most museum attendants are far more knowledgeable than one might expect, and not just from reading labels. In some museums the staff have access to the director's library during night shifts, and are encouraged to dip into its can't be too careful There was a time when security was not so tight, and nutters were more benign. A lady came to a National Trust property, armed with a pair of bicycle handlebars. The attendants could not persuade her to part with them, since she said she had been threatened by a man in the garden. She got quieter as she entered a long windowless corridor, until she came to a large painting of a male nude. "That's him!" she shricked, and shot off down the passage.

Being a museum attendant is not a glamorous job but those who do it have a quiet, protective affection both for their museums and the public even the bossy ones, who yell "Don't touch please!" with all the relish of a pantomime drill sergeant. In Palm Beach, Florida, however, to be an attendant at the newly-opened Henry Flangler Museum carries an enormous social cachet. Their job applications file reads like the Palm Beach social register, and there are 16 Rolls-Royces in the staff car-park.

George Bonilla, a V & A warder, laughed. "It's not like that here," he said. "Even the director comes to work in an old Ford."

Do come back, Mr Horton

Earlier this year Mr James B. Horton, president and publisher of Working Woman, one of the fastest magazines there was a market for his journal. Pretty sooo he decided that there wasn't. For Britain, it seemed to him, is very shart of womeo "who regard careers as exciting, glammous and sexy", If Mr Horton had stayed longer be would have been disillusioned further by the British way of life since be would have discovered that, over bere, men doo't regard careers as exciting, glamourous or sexy either. In fact, those adjectives are hardly ever used except to advertise the kind of black chiffon nightdress that meo buy their wives every Christmas Eve and which their wives then return to the store every Boxing Day.

Expecting a day at the office to produce the same glow as a candlelit dinoer with Robert Redford is asking altogether too much of any working life. On the other hand a career can be ioterestiog, fulfilling and a satisfactory method of paying the rent, something which womeo are discovering for themselves, as the increasing oumber of female graduates moving into finance, law, marketing and other potentially high-powered areas shows. All these working women might have bought a magazine like Forking Woman with its brisk articles oo negotiating a reasonable salary and what goes on at board meetings had Mr Horton given them the chance.

Audrey Slaoghter, the creator of Honey and Over 21, would like to launch a new magazine for women who work, but she is finding it tough going. Ooe financier she approached thought women wouldn't like to be seen carrying around That Sort of Thiog, as though she were proposing a ruder version of Playboy.

Perhaps he read more into the suggested features on working wardrobes and tax allowances than were apparent to the more innocent eye. Or it could be that he thought that women might be ashamed to have, tucked under their arm, something that smacks so heartily of Getting On.

Here he is on stronger ground because I know a woman publisher who feels oo end of a show-off when carrying a briefcase, although no other kind of reticule is as handy for housing her reports and manuscripts and lunchtime sandwich.

Happy accident

By and large, whether male or female, we are oot a natioo of careerists. When we call someone ambitious we certainly doo't mean it as a compliment, which is wby people so to great lengths to prove that it was only by happy accident that they found room at the top - "I just happeoed to meet this bloke who asked me had I ever thought of ruoning a multinational construction company"... "My dad bought me an old typewriter and suddenly Martin Scorsese put in a bid for the film rights."

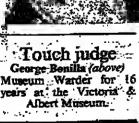

It is oot coosidered mannerly to ask someone you've just beeo introduced to what they do for a living even if their glossy pinstripes and cared-for fingernails suggest they have oothing to hide.

Although they may have dis-covered a cure for diabetes or redesigned half of Birmingham, they insist you wouldn't be interested in bearing about their job and then proceed to bore you with stories about their receot sailing holiday. Probably, were a visiting Martian to ask Mrs Thatcher her line of business, she would lower ber eyes modestly, mutter something about dabbling in politics and then give him her recipe for Chicken Veroni-

It is this low-key attitude towards work which has given people like Mr Hortoo pause. Terry Mansfield, managing director of the National Magazioe Company, is always searching for new publishing ideas and thought that even though two out of three women in Great Britain have jobs, the whole area of womeo and careers is muddled. "The dilemma when it comes down to it is that it's so difficult to translate in heads round the door and magazine terms." This may be true, but so is the undeniable fact that a me? I havea pretty good wbole generation of women is growing up with a creeping awareness that come rain or shine, come husband or come children, they will probably have to go oo working for most of their adult lives and will need some information on how best to do this. Since existing magazines largely ignore this fact of life, they could do with some specialized attention.

> • "Women and elephants never forget", wrote Dorothy Parker in her "Ballade of Unfortunate Mammais". Even more unfortunate, although she didn't write a poem about it, is that men never remember and are therefore doomed to be forever smiting their foreheads and cursing over a forgotten lunch appointment, business meeting or because they have let their Cornish cottage to one family having previously promised it to another for the selfsame fortnight.

There is no proven cure for lack of nemory although a course of ginteng tablets is meant to help. I am doubtful that this is the case, since one man, in mid-course, looked at the two capsules in the palm of his band, scatched his head and asked: What am I supposed to be taking

The Government and the Greater London Council are set to dance an intricate pas de deux over a projected Bolshoi Ballet visit to London next year. The Russians would be coming at the GLC's invitation for the first time since 1974, Ray Whitney, under-secretary at the Foreign Office, has written to the GLC's arts director, Lord Birkeit drawing attention to the Government's guidelines on cultural visits from the Soviet Union. Ale and farewell

What is happening to London's pubs? It reminds me of the blitz of the Sixties and early Seventies, when not even the most venerable local was safe from trendy interior designers with a lust for plastic fittings and keg beer where once mahogany and hand pumps had ruleo. (Bitter public reaction ultimately fed the Real Ale revolution, whose legacy is with us still,) The new vogue threatens to be no less devastating. Once again the pubs are being guited, to be rebuilt this time as Identikit mock Thirties establishments, all globular lighting, overhead fans and epicene art posters on the walls. The apparent intention is 10 be bistro, brasserie, Continental cafe and almost an afterthought. traditional public house all at the same time. The new customers seem to be mostly young people in fancy dress formerly seen only in certain television commercials or crepitating out of West End discos in the early hours. Usually, though not always, the name of the pub is changed to something arbitrary and whimsical remioiscent of a Wodehouse character or a stately home. For some reason "Muswell's" is the only one of these curiously anonymous names I can remember: I dub the process "Muswellization", and 1 deplore it.

Lebanon: is anarchy the aim?

Robert Fisk in Beirut explains why the mutual slaughter of Druze and Christian could serve the interests of both Syria and the Israelis

The young officers of C Squadron, the 1st Queen's Dragoon Guards. stood by the low roof parapet of the British beadquarters outside Beirut, sipping glasses of rum punch and enjoying the evening show. "Having quite a go at each other tonight, areo't they." a major with a thin moustache commented cheerfully. "Oh, boy, look at that." A line of hright pink tracer curled lazily over the village of Kfarshima and settled into the hillsides above us. A few seconds later there was a small. elearly defined flash near the Druze headquarters high up on the mountains, and an incoming shell exploded among the Phalangist

Over in the darkened copse to our right, the Israeli tank crews watched in silence. Only late in the evening. after almost four bours of anarchy in the area which they are meant to control, did they fire off a few rounds. The Chouf thereupon closed down for the night.

This dreadful spectacle is now being watched with ever increasing attention by all the armies in Lebanon: by the Lebanese who will have to enter the mountains when the Israelis leave: by the Americans and French and Italians and Britisb who will have to support them: by the Syrians who have armed many of the Druze militia and are fuelling the battles: by the Israelis who armed the Phalangists and are doing so little to prevent the conflict. Up at his presidential palace at Baabda, President Amin Gemayel can sit in the royal box with a grandstand view of the chaos he will inberit when the Israeli army withdraws to the Awali river. What price now President Reagan's commitment to Lebanese sovereignty?

Syria for one intends to make sure it is a high one. She has poured Katyusha rocket launchers into the Chouf for the Druze gunmen and has encouraged the preposterous Walid Jumblatt to set up a National Salvation Front with two other satrap Lebanese politiciaus in order to break Gemayel's prestige and wreck the Americans plans for foreign troop withdrawals from Syria is also planting the seeds of future civil chaos in Lebanon. organizing Lebanese gangsters into militias and introducing more Libyan troops and Iranian revolutionary guards - of all people - into the country. Syria will not withdraw her own troops. If the Chouf burns nightly for the next few months, its glow will illuminate no borrified faces in Damascus,

But Syria is not alone in her disgrace. Up in the Chouf itself, the Israelis bave virtually abdicated responsibility for the mutual slaughter of Druze and Christian. Druze leader the other day claimed that our moral conscience should force us to stay here until peace is restored", an Israeli reservist major said last week, "He said we have to wait until a new National Co has been worked out that prevents Phalangist domination. But it's got nothing to do with moral conscience. It isn't our job to sort out these centuries-old quarrels."

This is true - but it is not the whole truth. The Druze-Christian conflict has indeed simmered on ever since the Druze massacred 10,000 Maronites in 1968, but until the Israeli army arrived with their beavily armoured Phalangist allies in the Chouf last summer, there had been no wholesale civil war in the area for many years.

Treatment for a wounded Christian released by the Druze in a recent prisoner exchange.

Now, for the 400,000 people who live io these 200 square miles of mountains and valleys, life has become a nightmare, as one incident that occurred not long ago oear Deir el Qamar illustrates. Christians kidoapped Druze motorists from their cars. They selected 15 young men, separated them from their wives and children, and took them to an old bridge over a rocky gorge. There, a man systematically plunged a 2ft butcher's knife into each one's body and the corpses were thrown on to the rocks below. The knife just missed one man's beart and he survived because the bodies of the others cushioned his fall. He thus survived to tell the tale. The Druze, needless to say, are dispatching Christian captives with equal sav-

All these incidents are occurring in an area which - as the maps issued to the press by the Israeli army always state - falls "under Israeli control". But armies have a duty to protect the civilians in their area of occupation. Occasionally, the Israelis arrange an exchange of hostages but it would take more than their 1,500 troops in the Chouf to bring law and order to the mountains. So they have abandoned any attempt to do so. Indeed, just after Christian gunmen had tried to kidnap a colleague, a womao passenger and myself on the main Damascus bighway recently, an

Israeli patrol drove past without even asking the gunmen who they were. The Israelis talk daily about the need to stamp out terrorists: yet the Chouf is packed with terrorists and they are doing nothing about it. Little wonder therefore that Lebanese ministers - and a few

American diplomats based in Beirut - privately voice their suspicion that the Israelis want the anarchy to cootinue. If it does, the Lebaoese army may be unable to control the mountains. thus proving that southern Lebanon should remain in Israeli hands. Why, for example are the Israelis permitting Syrian 122mm guns to pass through their lines and reach the Druze? The Lebanese are wondering whether Israel now wants to abandon the Phalange and compete with Syria to set up a Druze mini-state that will act as a buffer zone north of the Awali River. The argument contains a curious irony since the Syrians certainly do want the anarchy to go on. If Mr Gemayel's government fails in its duties and collapses. America's credibility will collapse with it and US Marines will inevitably be drawn into the subsequent fighting. In-creased US involvement in Lebanon may - according to the Lebanese be an aspiration of both Syria and Israel, though for different reasons Even without the Chouf, however, there is likely to be no respite for intelligence men - to be seen on the roads of southern Lebanon as there are Syrian gunmen - secret service-men from Damascus and "Mohaberat" agents - in eastern and northern Lebanoo. Even the military withdrawal agreement - the so-called "normalization of relations" pact with Lebanon which Israel now pro-claims - has brought the Israelis no real comfort. President Gemayel has not signed the treaty and so far the Lebanese authorities have shown their gratitude by prosecuting merchants who sell Israeli fruit and banning The Jerusalem Post in Beirut, Last week, almost incredibly Katyusha rockets fell again in north Galilee, on the land which Israel's invasion was meant to protect forever. They were fired from Syria may appear to have the advantage at the moment, but she has few Arab allies and her alliance with the Soviet Union remains secure only so long as the super-powers maintain such poor relations with each other. An agreement on nuclear arms or an Andropov-Rea-gan summit would quickly diminish Syria's strategic and political demands in Lebanon.

The real loser is likely to be the United States, which now supports a city state and pretends it is a country. Her withdrawal plans are in dations with the Arabs are at their lowest point in recent years. ber leverage over Israel reduced still further. The PLO's arcane rejection of the Reagao peace plan has destroyed any chance of a Palestinian settlement in the near future. Show me that nuclear woe

Not long ago, I drew pointed attention to a great lie that provides much of the foundation for the organized advocacy of unilateral nuclear disarmament by the West, the claim that because unlimited nuclear war would be a catastropbe without parallel, therefore the best way of avoiding the catastrophe is for our side to disarm alooe. The lie resides not in the claim, which I believe is mistaken but can be argued; it is in the "therefore", for the whole thrust of the unilateralist movement is to suggest that the borrors of nuclear war themselves prove the case for western defence-lessness. The logical hiatus between the two halves of the argument is as plain to the unilateralists as it is to me, but propaganda and veracity have rarely shared a bed, and this instance is no exception.

There are, however, two more lies that poison the wells of the nuclear argument. One is the constant suggestion, as impudent as it is mendacious, that only those who advocate unilateral nuclear disarmament want peace. The very word "peace" has been stolen from its honourable place in the language and used to suggest that those who believe that peace may be more easily and safely secured by strength are not really seeking peace at all; indeed, much of the time the disarmers go further, and use of themselves the word "anti-war", with the clear implication that those who reject their case are "pro-war". But it is the last part of the Triad of Untruth that concerns me today, particularly since it is the part that has been least remarked and least commented upoo, though its exposure and rebuke are no less important than in the case of the two other suggestiones falsi.

I think it will be widely agreed that a nuclear war would not be much fun ("My dear, the noise – and the people"). Indeed, so little fun would it be that at first glance there is nothing very surprising in the suggestion that contemplation of the dangers is attended on all hands by great gloom and fear, and leaves those doing the contemplating wan and wrinkled, with a tendency to burst into tears if somebody slams a is so dark and sinister that it disturbs the mind, paralyses the will, deadens the feelings and leads inevitably to aimlessness, social unrest and a constant increase in the incidence of crime, divorce, unemployment and herpes. The nation, obsessed by its impending fate, is mindful every time it puts its Sunday leg of lamb in the oven that it may sbortly be badly overcooked itself. Conversation deals with nothing else, and the unbroken silence of an evening in every pub in the land, as unhappy patrons stare into their glasses and think upon their end, bears eloquent witness to the way in which thoughts of nuclear annihilation now occupy attenuon to the exclusion of all other subjects, from the ballet to the football pools. It will be at once apparent that my account is exaggerated. What may not be so readily understood is that even a less extravagantly worded account of the situation would be equally baseless. Yet it is part of the case made by those who advocate nuclear disarmament by our side alone (those urging unilateral disarmament on the Soviet Union are for some reason not numerous in these parts, and their demon-strations rarely if ever make difficulties for the traffic) that the effect of the very existence of the bomb is to cause untold misery on

The truth is that although there is indeed a danger of nuclear war (though not nearly so great as is made out by those in the husiness of frightening ionocent folk for their own ends), and although if such a conflict were to break out the results would indeed be terrible (on this point the frighteners hardly need to exaggerate, though they do), nobody actually spends time worrying, or even thinking, about it.

Test your own experience and see whether it does not accord with mine. (Unilateralists, in answering, will be obliged to take a lie-detector test and swear their statements before a commissioner for oaths.) I have discussed matters nuclear with those of every persuasion on the spectrum, from pacifists who would never knowingly harm an insect, let

of a substantial increase in nuclear arms, and I bave yet to meet anyone, however passionate in the cause argued, who shows any sign that his or her life is actually affected by it, that any sleep is lost or meal pushed away untouched, that burg-lary and wife-beating begin to seem less wrong in view of the likelihood that the world will shortly come to

This, as a matter of fact, is what we would expect, as an analogy will make clear. We all know the facts about road accidents, but we never go about the streets in a state of apprebeosion, dwelling on the possibilities of being run down, over or into. And that is not because we do not care about our lives, or because we are hardened against feeling in view of our knowledge of the dreadful casualty figures, but because our feelings, and even our subconsciouses, have got better things to do with their time than about such dangers, real though they are.

But we can be less subjective.

Take those who are most clamorous in advocating nuclear disarmament as the way to Mr Andropov's heart. What is the most striking fact about them all - so striking that it is instantly visible before they have said a word on the subject that concerns them? It is that they are all having the most marrellous time. Indeed, whenever I see the sleek, plump, wonderfully self-satisfied face of Monsignor Kent I wateb the television screen waiting for a sign that reads "Do not adjust your set -the sound you bear is His Reverence

Camping at Greenham Common may not be your idea of fun, and it tertainly is not mine, but it plainly suits the campers down to the ground, even when the ground is muddy, the whole enterprise is symbolized and summed up by the lady who left the family for a weekend under canvas with the girls, and found the experience so delightful that she never returned to her home. And when we see pictures of the girls on television, rain or shine, they are invariably smiling, and frequently dancing, to boot.

outing for the participants, with nothing to be seen but happy faces and nothing to be beard from the winding column but merriment and

As for Mr E. P. Thompson, he bas made an entire new life, clearly stimulating and enjoyable, out of urging military weakness upon the West; if all the world's nuclear weapons were to vanish overnight together with the knowledge of their manufacture, his thoughts would surely turn to self-ending. (No they wouldn't, though; he would speedily discover unimaginable dangers in the conventional weapons possessed by Nato in general and Britain in rticular.)

Obviously, those whose trade is persuading Britain to disarm have an interest in trying to make our flesh creep, and a further interest in maintaining that our flesh actually is creeping. The dangers and borrors of nuclear war, bowever, are just as plain to me as they are to the members of CND, yet I do not feel obliged to paint a picture of a nation going mad with worry.

Of course, CND would raply that that is only natural, since I would cagerly welcome a nuclear holocaust, partly because I am a callous and bloodthirsty brute and partly because I have been supplied by the authorities with a lavishly-equipped bomb proof shelter. The truth is otherwise, I know that Britain is not a land of trembling neurotics consumed with incrachcable hope-tessness at the ever-overnt thought lessness at the ever-present thought of Armageodon, and I think it is important to point out that those who argue along those lines do so falsely. I will not be blackmailed into accepting that the threat of nuclear war means that the only way to ensure that it will not happen is to be weak; I will not be defamed into accepting that we who believe that strength is the best way of avoiding it are not truly seeking peace; and will not be decrived into accepting the unilateralist case by the baseless claim that because of Britain's nuclear weapons the country is drowning in terror and despair. © Times Newspapers Limited, 1983

An old-fashioned marriage for Couple of the Month

I have developed a theory about political commentators and it is called the Theory of Wrong Advice. It is distinguishable from the Socialist Theory of the Media Conspiracy in that it promotes the idea that political commentators invariably give wrong advice to all political parties - not intentionally but because they are really no more prescient than the rest of us.

For instance, they encourage the Conservative Pary to behave as if Margaret Thatcher were both immortal and inviocible and will get away with murder indefinitely (which is, in the nature of thiogs, unlikely). They are at present advising the Labour Party to reject its own left wing and most of the policies that 90 per cent of its members believe in (which makes about as much sense as telling Napoleon he could have won the battle of Waterloo if only he had sent the French army bome).

For the SDP, the advice - only days after the party was founded was to cut out all the promotion and razzamatazz and get down to detailed policy making (a bad error of timing in retrospect). Now we are being told to jettison serious policy making and sort out our relationship with the Liberals. My gut reaction. as well as the guidance provided by the Theory of Wrong Advice, tells me they have got it exactly the wrong way round. Protracted discussion of our relationship with the Liberals now could create division where none need exist; while the need for fundamental thinking about policies for a post-industrial society is urgent, and is not being done by either of the other political groupings.

However, it looks as if the wrong advice will be heeded, after all. The outside world has developed a keen interest in what is going on between us. We have become Couple of the Month and, like all politicians eager for the limelight, we are playing up to it. Our discussions on How Far Can We Go Before Marriage? will interest the media far more than our ideas on the future of the National Health Service. Unfortunately.

So all local groups in both parties are bolding meetings and submitting views on the issue. We had ours last week. It was an excellent debate, but my heart went out to the member who said at the end: "I came to this meeting with a completely open mind and nobody yet has said anything to change it... In truth, I suspect that at the grass-roots level in both parties are a majority of people who think the relatiooship is going swimmingly and feel both harassed and embarrased by the different pieces of Pancras North. She is a men advice being received from various the SDP National Committee.

quarters: on the one hand "This thaison must be regularized!" and on the other "You're young yet! Doo't make up your mind too quickly!"

Political allegiance probably has more to do with self-image than it has to do with policies. (Why else did not more moderate members of the Labour Party join us when they agreed with every sentence of the Limebouse Declaration? Liberals see their party as the natural home of the radical tradition, the dignity of the individual and of community politics. Social Democrats see themselves as a modern European party of the left, with a mission to abolish poverty and challenge the institutionalized inenia of Britain's social political and industrial life. There is nothing incompatible here. It is the self-image of people, rather than their fundamental political philosophy, that would be damaged by a total merger.

The important debates which both our parties (and indeed the whole nation) will have to have will not divide on strictly party lines. The balance between growth and the environment, the practicalities of the greater devolution of power in which we both believe. the difficult moral issues implied by the continued existence of private health and private education - in any mixed Alliance forum in which these issues are discussed I have found both Liberals and Social Democrais on either side of the argument.

But it would be foolish to disparage self-image. Probably the relationship most of us would like to emulate is the sort of contemporary marriage where both partners keep their own surnames, jobs and bank accounts, but are none the less in both a formal and an emotional sense committed to each other. Nobody in the SDP wants to become just "Mrs Liberal", or even "Mrs Alliance". But we do want the rest of the world to be in no doubt that we are staying together.

What we need is a formula to encapsulate this combination - and for the formalities to be concluded as quickly as possible so that we can get on with the business.

There should be no doubt as to what the business is. In that sense, it should be a thoroughly old-fashioned marriage. In other words, one whose chief purpose is procreation. We are in the business of increasing and multiplying, and peopling the nation with the fruit of our Alliance. By the time the registrar comes round we will have worked out what surnames go on the birth certificates.

Tory torpedos for shipbuilding

Not long ago. Britannia still ruled the small but still sizeable export the waves. As recently as 1962, we were the world's leading shipbuilder.

Mixed yards, capable of building That has changed drastically. Last year Britain was down to a demeaning ninth place internationally; and even this low ranking concealed the humiliating truth that British shipbuilders in 1982 obtained only 1.8 per cent of the world's construction orders.

Shipbuilding in this country has suffered a painful trauma. In the past six years the workforce has fallen from 87,469 to 62,583 and 9,000 jobs are to go in the next two years. Yards have closed; repairs have contracted almost to vanishing point. Yet since 1979 this industry has received £780m in aid from the Treasury. When the latest massive loss was reported last week by loss was reported last week by British Shipbuilders, the reaction of the Department of Trade and Industry was to promise yet more money. What is a Tory government doing, handing over such huge sums to a tiny, state-owned, loss-making industry? Do we really need a shipbuilding industry at all?

That we still need ships is incontrovertible. Even today we possess the sixth largest merchant fleet in the world, with most of those countries apparently ahead of us sucb as Liberia and Panama sheltering under flags of con-venience; and of course we remain an important naval power. Obviously, we must build our own warships, It would be unthinkable to place our battle fleet at the mercy of foreign suppliers.

Our merchant shipowners seem to feel the necessity for a domestic shipbuilding capacity much less keenly. While recently Belgian owners have ordered 94.4 per cent of ships from their own yards, the French 91.8 per cent and Italians 99.4 per cent, it is lamentable that British owners have seen fit to obtain only 47 per cent of their needs from their own country. Even the Central Electricity Generating Board placed an order in Korea not long age. While such lack of patriotism is to be deplored, does it not harshly indicate that British Shipbuilders merchant division, now with fewer employees than the warship yards, has become a costly

Even if we set aside the melodramatic consideration that a buge merchant freet unable to renew itself in its own country would become a prisoner of Far Eastern conglomerates, it is undeniable that the peculiar economics of warship construction require the maintenance of substantial British merchant shipbuilding capacity. Naval work is centred on three big specialist yards, but these cannot alone cope with the Royal Navy's needs, let alone satisfy both warships and other kinds of vessels, are essential too. Because of the irregular flow of naval orders, these British Shipbuilders' subsidiaries have to provide their yards with other work in order to maintain the labour force and concomitant facilities needed for the naval programme. In brutal fact, merchant shipbuilding, subsidized though it may be by the Department of Trade and Industry, in its turn subsidizes naval shiphuilding and is indispensable to its well-regulated continu-

That is why the Government's proposals to sell off the naval yards to private owners are industrially illiterate as well as politically spiteful. The statement to the Commons last Thursday by Mr Norman Lamont, the Minister of State, had originally contained a paragraph worded: "As I have already made clear, bowever, some parts of BS are profitable. The Government remains firmly committed to privatizing British Shipbuilders' activities as soon as possible, and wherever possible. At the last moment, in the second sentence, the words "British Shipbuilders" were deleted and the word those" inserted in their place. This almost imperceptible change tellingly revealed the Government's view that only profitable yards should be privatized. The state would be left with the rest, which it could then be excused for closing down, despite the terrifying employment impli-cations for the Lower and Upper Clyde, the Tyne, the Wear and Yet of course the main difference between the naval yards and the merchant yards is that, while the merchant yards are partly subsi-dized, the naval yards are wholly subsidized. Every penny they "earn" comes either from the Treasury or from export orders directly dependent on the domestic naval work.

The Government plans to throw merchant shipyard workers on to the scrapheap, even though ministers admit that every shipbuilding nation in the world subsidizes its merchant yards at least as much as Britain does. At the same time, that same Government intends to provide vast subsidies to private owners of naval yards, whose guaranteed profits will be provided not by Mrs Thatcher's god of the market place but by the generous British taxpayer. Our shipbuilding industry, like all others throughout the world, is in a mess caused by the international re-cession. The Tory solution is to transform it into a uniquely British. impeccably ideological, mess.

GOVERNMENT FLAT

Twice since being confirmed in office the Government, in the person of Mr Cecil Parkinson the new Secretary of State for Trade. has intervened to frustrate judges any criticism of the judicial processes where major methods of doing justice, though has intervened to frustrate matters of private and public interest were involved. The circumstances of these two exceptional interferences are very different from each other, but they have enough in common to suggest that their proximity is not mere coincidence.

In the case of the Stock Exchange and its restrictive practices the Government has effectively balted proceedings before the court by promoting an out of court settlement". The settlement does not, as might be supposed, take the form of agreement between the parties to the litigation - on the contrary, one of the parties, the director of the Office of Fair Trading, has publicly expressed his dissatisfaction with what bas been arranged. The settlement takes the form of a compact between the other party, the Stock Exchange Council, and the minister. This, though it appears to dispose of the matter, will require parliamentary validation, possibly in the form of primary legislation, removing the Stock Exchange from the amhit of the restrictive practices

The other matter concerns allegations before tribunals in the United States that British Airways and British Caledonian participated in commercial actions encompassing the downfall of Laker in 1982 contrary to the anti-trust laws contained in the Sherman and Clayton Acts of the United States Congress. Here the signature of the minister suffices to exempt his clients. He has ordered those two airlines, hy power given him under the Protection of Trading Interests Act 1980, not to produce to the United States Department of Justice or to the courts there documents held outside the territorial jurisdiction of the United States or to disclose to them any commercial information demanded in those proceedings. Mr Parkinson did not report to Parliament either his order or his reasons for he made the order.

The effect of this order was considered by the Court of Appeal last week in related proceedings. British Airways and British Caledonian had asked for to block financial rescue, is not authority is also seen in the an injunction restraining Laker from pursuing a civil action fordamages before the district court of the District of Columbia, invoking United States anti-trust should be extremely slow to make litigation abroad inaccessible in cases where there is no domestic tribunal to which recourse can be had. He emphasized that the Court of Appeal in the United States to make them amenable to the jurisdiction of its courts". Nor had the English different, of their "cousins in law" in the United States. Nor had they any feeling of hostility towards American anti-trust laws or would ever wish to denigrate them.

What caused the Court of Appeal to grant the injunction at the end of the argument was. the earlier intervention of the minister. His order to the airlines forbidding them to-"untriable". Neither could Laker adequately document their charges against the British airlines, nor could the airlines adequately defend themselves.

The Government of course has substantial reasons for deliberately aborting these two sets of proceedings. It is now of the opinion that litigation under the Restrictive Practices Act is not the most suitable way of cleansing the Stock Exchange and fitting it to adapt to fast changing techniques in international financial markets.

There is much in that. But it is the same government, give or take a minister or two, which let the reference stand when it first came into office in 1979 and which has allowed it to go forward for seven years with accumulating costs to the parties of some £1.5 million. Only now does it wind it up. And the substitute the Government has provided - agreement on an outline for self-reform by the Stock Exchange Council without a monitoring agency - is undoubtedly a much less searching examination of practices which may have more to do with the convenience and profit of the practitioners than with the maintenance of an efficient and adaptable exchange in stocks and sbares purged of artificial expense.

The Government sees its intervention in the Laker case as another round in its resistance to Washington's habit of making extra-territorial application of its government", of the assumption of the assumption of ever-wider powers by the drawn with the Administration's making it. Nor, amazingly, has purported interference last year the Russian pineline con-Commons about it during the tracts. The parallel is not very five weeks that have passed since exact. An international combination in restraint of trade of the kind alleged, the two chief elements of which are price fixing to drive Laker out of business and concerted pressure easy to pin down territorially. (Within whose jurisdiction does the transatlantic telephone lie?) But the facts alleged certainly have a prominent American legislation.

The Master of the Rolls However, the Government explained that an English court has another leg to stand on. Air services between the United States and the United Kingdom are regulated by a treaty concluded in 1977 known as the Bermuda 2 Agreement. It provides for the mntual arrangeno way questioned the jurisdic- ment by the two countries'

"carry on business sufficiently in and fares, it also prescribes procedures to be followed in case of disagreement, leading ultimately to arbitration. The British Government claims that by going outside Bermuda 2 and wheeling on its anti-trust laws (the United States Department of Justice cites the two British airlines in its investigation of the Laker collapse before a grand. jury) the United States Government is in breach of its treaty obligations.

This is an argument the layman hesitates to enter, unless it be to suggest that there could well be commercial activities of cooperate with the American an unlawful kind alleged against court had rendered the case foreign airlines in the United States (fraud for instance) that would not be removed from the jurisdiction of the United States courts by any treaty regulating the provision of air services; and that the allegation about combining to block the Laker rescue operation might fall into that category even if the allegation about "predatory fares" might

> Anyway, however solid the Government's ground may be for seeking to exempt the two British airlines from these antitrust proceedings and the enormous penalties they might impose, and however important success in that endeavour may be for the Government's plans for the early privatization of British Airways, the upshot is that application of the free world's most effective measures against restraint of competition is partially frustrated in respect of one of the free world's least openly competitive international businesses.

There is irony in this recital. This is a government that is fully alive to the benefits of competition and to the primary role that market forces must play in the economies of nations. Yet here it is intervening both domestically and abroad to call off the agencies that enforce the laws explicitly enacted to vindicate those principles and promote the relevant practices.

These are ministers, 100, who are the sworn opponents of "big central political organs of the state, and of the perpetual intervention by executive government in the affairs of July 29. individuals and autonomous public agencies. Yet here they are using their executive authority to interrupt judicial process. The same tendency towards the aggrandizement of central Government's itch to decide the rate levels for particular and perhaps all local councils, and the speed with which it has nominated itself to become next controller of London's regional public transport system.

None of these actions is out of order, each comes with justification attached, yet all jar with the account the Government's apologists give of its principles and purposes. They contribute to the impression of fading coherence that has been noted in Mrs tion of the American district regulatory agencies of such Thatcher's administration since court: both British airlines matters as routes, frequencies it was confirmed in June.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

in Nicaragua

Sir, It is with grave concern that we witness the recent escalation of tension in Central America and the dispatching by President Reagan of a task force of eight carriers, with 6,000 troops and some 70 aircraft: a: force the same size as that sent to the Falklands.

This obvious intention to seek a military rather than a peaceful solution for the area is to be condemned. The pressure (verbal, economic and military) on Nicaragua has increased since President Reagan took office and during this year has escalated dramatically. The peace moves by the Contadora group of countries and the six-point peace plan put forward by Nicaragua show a flexibility and a readiness to seek a peaceful solution. The United States had insisted that any negotiations be multilateral. Nicaragua has now agreed. Are we to see once again the Reagan Administration search for some other pretext to continue its attacks against Nicaragua? For so long we were told that the aggressive policy against Nicaragua was to halt the flow of arms from that country to El Salvador. No convincing proof has ever been exhibited to back up this claim that this flow of arms exists, even though the US has used the most sophisticated techniques available (ships, planes, tracking stations). Now we are told that this would not now be sufficient and that President Reagan sees little hope of asatisfactory solution while the current government remains in

It is this Government that over the past four years has tackled the severe social problems of Nicaragua: the injustices and inequalities so prevalent in the area. Programmes of land reform, health, education, and housing have been initiated. The standard of living has improved. All this has been achieved despite the economic pressure used by President Reagan in cutting direct government loans and vetoing Nicaragua's requests in international banking circles.

As tension mounts, there has been little or no serious debate of Nicaragua's peace plan: only President Reagan's reaction to it. For people who have suffered US occupation in the past and a barbarous dictatorship of the Somoza family for more than 50 years, it is our responsibility to help them find a peaceful solution to the current crisis and raise our voices on their bebalf against the obvious war intentions of President Reagan.

The Cooperative Hall,

A defective term

From the Reverend Edward Yarnold,

Sir. Richard Harries (article, July 23) speaks kindly of the Anglican-/Roman Catholic International Commission's "remarkable achievements". But he fails to understand one aspect of the commission's work. If he thinks that it has simply passed the issue of infallibility on to its successor, being content to replace the contentious term "infal-libility" by "indefectibility" -especially when the latter quality is understood, as by Professor Kung, as if it were that of a boxer who gets a hammering in every round but is miraculously on his feet at the final

The commission took the issue to be the way in which the Holy Spirit uses human means to maintain the Church in the truth of the Gospel. It believed that there was a large amount of agreement between the two eburches concerning the part the universal primate would play in this process, among other human means.

The Government's reply sheds no light at all on the mystery as to why Club Mediterrance, though bound by a legal contract, failed to build its vacation village by the due date of December 31, 1982; yet foreign speculators apparently found it well worthwhile to invest $13m in the tiny island of Providenciales, presumably because of the construction of an international airport there (paid for with your money and mine).

The Government claim that as a result of the airport project budget-ary aid to the TCI will be substantially reduced. However, they have already lost two years' revenue from the Club Med village voted to retain the money.

From the Chairman of the London Electricity Consultative Council

Sir, I would like to support Lady Burton's letter (July 29) about the profits of the gas industry by drawing attention to the comparable position for electricity consumers. This will become clear to all concerned when the industry's accounts are published on Thursday.

In real terms, electricity prices have risen by 50 per cent since 1974. In the last financial year, the London Electricity Board has made a clear surplus of nearly £23 million over and above the financial target set by the Government. LEB has achieved this unprecedented result, m part because inflation was lower than expected during the year, and in part because it improved the costeffectiveness of its own operating performance.

At its meeting held on June 16, the London Electricity Consultative Council welcomed the LEB's con-tainment of its operating costs, and formally recommended the Board to repay the excess surplus to con-sumers. It was clear to the Council that they had been required to pay more for their electricity in 1982/83 than was necessary for the Board to meet its statutory duties and the Government's target. When the Board met on June 28 to consider the recommendation, it was invited to endorse a chief officer's report which recited reasons as to why the money should not be given back.

SDP constitution

From Mr Edward Lyons, QC Sir. As SDP legal affairs spokesman in the last Parliament 1 was interested in the talk of joint selection of candidates by the SDP and Liberal parties for the European elections in 1984.

Under the SDP constitution the national committee has no power to order such a process. Its relevant powers are limited to ordering SDP area parties not to put up candidates (so a Liberal has a clear field) and to recommending SDP voters to vote for a candidate of another party with similar principles.

Further, a cardinal principle of the constitution is "one member, one vote" - a principle frequently reasserted by the requirement to hold a postal ballot, e.g. for president, leader, nationally elected members of the national committee and area party officers and com-insensitive.

From Mr Tim Tatton-Brown Sir. The Editor of Current Archaeology (July 23) is correct in saying that we must reduce the over-inflated value of antiquities, increasingly bought as a hedge against inflation.

Thanks to the "pioneering work" of unscrupulous men like Duveen (whose ill-gotten gains ironically paid for the gallery in the British Museum that now houses the Elgin/Parthenon Marbles), antiquities all over the world are being looted from archaeological sites and then sold for ridiculous prices at Sotheby's, Christie's, etc. This means that in Britain more and more money had to be found for our

Tour ban anomalies

From Mr Donald Woods Sir, Mr N. M. Forster (July 27) asserts that South Africa has a free press. It has not. South Arfican newspapers have to contend with more than 200 legislative restrictions under 26 statutes enacted to suppress publication of material which would be regarded in any democratic country as legitimate

Three examples suffice. The Prisons Act, the Degfence Act and the Police Act severely limit publication of any penal, military or police matters not approved beforehand by the state.

Apart from the many and complex publication laws there are also the arbitrary powers the state uses to silence journalists without prosecution or trial. I was editor of one of South Africa's oldest-estab-

out of South Africa for five years, it would still be a criminal offence for any South African newspaper to print anything I say or write on any subject, even if it were a commen-dation of the Surrey County Cricket Club for repairing the wall of the 14 (Hansard, col 46) that the ODA (Overseas Development Administ-ration) had fiddled the figures to make the project show a real financial return; in fact, Whitehall was so incompetent in its appraisal that a senior ODA official gave the wrong set of figures in evidence to the Select Committee and did not even know at the time that he was giving the wrong figures. Whether the calculations were "fiddled" is, I suppose, a matter of semantics; at the minimum they were "massaged".

Parental authority and the pill These included "administrative

From Mr Ian S. P. Barker

Sir, The recent case of Gillick v West Norfolk and Wisbech Area Health Authority (Law Report, July 27) has brought into question the problem of parental control over the medical treatment of their children.

I am sure that Mrs Gillick has the best of motives in trying to assert her control as a parent, but I would suggest that full parental authority is not desirable in relation to medical treatment. Such authority would be based on the misconception that all parents are as concerned for the welfare of their children as Mrs Gillick.

Lord Devlin (July 29) seems to desire a greater degree of parental control and quotes Lord Radciffe as saying, in relation to public policy,
"... there are some things the law will not stand for". Is it possible that the law would stand for the reprisal by parents, perhaps on religious grounds, to allow a blood trans-fusion to a child that might otherwise die?

The cases of Re B (a minor) [1981] I WLR 1421 and Re D (a minor) [1976] I All. ER 326 illustrate the danger of allowing absolute parental control over children. In the former case, the parents of a child suffering from Down's Syndrome refused to give consent to a life-saving operation on the child. Fortunately, the child was made a ward of court, and so the operation was performed. If full parental authority had been accept-ed in the case of Re D. a slightly retarded girl of eleven years would have been sterilised, even though she would eventually have had the intellectual capacity to marry. Concern and the wish to control are natural, laudable, and desirable, but in terms of medical consent it is vital that these be balanced with the interest of the children, which cannot always be determined by parents.

I respect the concern of Mrs Gillick, but would suggest that there may be hidden dangers in altering the present balance of the law. Yours faithfully, IAN S. P. BARKER.

First Jewish MP

From Mr Stephen Schick Sir, The caption under the photograph in The Times today (July 27) of the Chief Rabbi, the Home Secretary and Mr Greville Janner, MP, at a luncheon states it was beld to celebrate "the 125th anniversary of the election of the first Jewish MP Baron Lionel de Rothschild."

This is not so. Baron Lionel was first elected as a Whig MP for the City of London in August, 1847, but felt unable to take the oath, as required, "on the true faith of a Christian" and was debarred from taking his seat. He was subsequently returned for the City on five different occasions until, in 1858, a campaign inside and outside Parliament succeeded in allowing the House of Commons to modify the oath against the opposition of the Lords. Baron Lionel then sat in the House for 15 years without once speaking publicity.

Queen Victoria refused, grounds of Baron Lionel's religion, to accept Gladstone's recommendation in 1869 that he be made a peer and the struggle for Jewish parliamentary emanicipation was only finally won when his son, Nathaniel, became the first Lord Rothschild in 1885. this is changing.
On Friday it was announced that the American trade deficit was $4,960m m June, compared to $6,910m in May. In other words, the trade deficit is now running at an annual rate of at least $60,000m. The prospect is for further deterioration. With economic recovery gathering pace, companies will need to rebuild their stocks of raw materials and consumers will step up their demand for foreign products. The United States Commerce Secretary has frankly acknowledged that the trade deficit "could reach $100,000m deficits of this size and expect the dollar to retain a reserve currency role. But, for the moment, there is widespread complacency about the balanceof-payments outlook. The reason is that the dollar, far from suffering speculative attacks on the foreign exchanges, remains an extremely strong currency. The dollar's apparent defiance of economic logic calls for an explanation. It is a commonplace that a country with a large current account deficit shouldhave a weak currency. There is no doubt that this simple principle applies very effectively to France, Italy and dozens of smaller deficit nations around the world. But it does not seem to work with the United States. The American deficit next year will be at least five times the size. of the French, but the dollar is at the top of the foreign exchanges' popularity list while the franc is

But short-run dollar appreciation can only aggravate the long-run adjustment problem. By making American exports even more uncompetitive on world markets, a higher dollar today implies an even larger current account deficit in a year's time. Danger of overwrapping babies

By Pearce Wright, Science Editor

The idea that habies, especially when unweil, should be kept very warm is described in the current British Medical Journal as folklore that can be responsible for a devastating but preventable illness.

A call for a halt to the oldfashioned practice of over wrapping to be made an important part of health education comes from Dr Christopher Bacon, of Friarage Hospital, Northallerton, North Yorkshire, and Dr. Martin Bellman, of the Hospital for Sick Children, Great Ormand Street, London. 32e).

Their appeal for awareness of the hazards of heatstroke in babies is timely because of the heat wave. But the concexion with the bot weather is coincidental.

Depression over M1 grips market

The financial markets in the United States were showing signs of acute nervous exhaus-tion, on Friday night. Bonds had had a dismal week, as prices had been progressively reduced on the expectation of rising inflation and another bad money supply figure on Friday.

By Thursday, stocks had make the disease and had a caught the disease and had a raging case of depression. On Thursday, and Friday com-bined, the Dow Jones Indus-trial average fell more than 31

When the money number was finally announced on Friday afternoon, it was at least as bad as feared. After revisions M1 rose $1.5bu (about £961m) following a rise of $300m the previous week and a huge increase of $5.6bm in the first week of July.

As a result, M1 now stands about $2.9bn over the present target. What is more, the target has only just been revised upwards very substantiell.

Mr Paul Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, amounced this revision in his testimony the week before last to the Congress. He said the massive increase in M1 during the first half of the year would not be counted as part of the new targets, which were based on the average of the second

An annual growth rate band of 5-9 per cent on top of this second quarter average was to be permitted during second half of this year.

But M1 is already over tha top of this target range which many critics of the Federal Reserve said was far too generous a portion of money growth for an economy expanding as vigorously as the United States is at this time. In the second quarter, real gnp rose at an annual rate of 8.7 per cent and informed analysts, including the highly respected Citibank team, believe that the second quarter gnp could show a rise of 8-9 per cent in real terms In the last two weeks, there has also been a sharp rise in commodity futures. The Commodity Research Bureau seen by the public at large as index of commodity futures rose from 248 to 260 in the IMF "bailout".

past two weeks-a very sharp increase of nearly 5 per cent over such a short period.

Big United States Goverment Treasury borrowing requirements have also taken their toll of the nervous systems of financial market participants.
The upshot has been sharp rise in interest rates. The "bellwether" 103, 2012 US Treasury bond had fallen to 88 by the close on Friday, to give a yield of 11.8 per cent. In early May before fears of excessive money growth and burgeoning inflation took hold, these long bonds were yielding 10.3 per cent.

The immediate outlook is for a further rise in these long yields, to something in the range of 12-12.5 per cent. The driving force for the upturn in yieds is the fear of returning infaltion. Recent surveys of US money managers reveal a strong increase in inflation

Gold and dollar have both been affected by the determination of the American financial markers not to be "stung" again by the depradations of inflation on the value of fixed interest assets. Gold is stuck around $415-425. The dollar keeps vanlting to ever greater beights. When the dollar pass effortlessly through the "barrier" of DM 2.60 and went on to close very near to DM 2.65, currency bears had to run for

The stockmarket cannot escape the effects of the rapidly spreading fear that money growth is out of control and that a rate of inflation of about 7-8 per cent in the second half of next year is inevitable.

COVEL"

The stock markets have gone nowhere since the end of April and seem likely to be held down under the weight of the gloom in the bond markets. The problem the Administration has had in getting reluctant Congress to agree to provide an additional $8ba for the International Monetary Fund has also required restraint by the banks oo interest rates - as they are

Personnel swap between Whitehall and companies brings exports results

How the other half does business

A fundamental change in the relationship between govern-ment and industry could evolve: from a programme started by. the civil service to swop senior personnel with leading British

The programme gives future senior civil servants the opportunity to work within a company for two or more years and gives industrialists the chance to study the workings of government from within.

The programme is already producing results. Mr Roger Holmes, a senior secretary from the Department of Trade and industry, is now company secretary at the independent telecommunications Mercury, having already served with Sir Michael Edwardes, Mercury's chairman, at British.

Mr Patrick Hodgson, from merchant bankers Schroder Waggf, is making his presence felt within the DTI's project and export policy division, fighting to increase the range and scope off government support for companies in overseas markets.

Although it is still early days, the merger of Trade and Industry and a change of political attitude at highest levels presage more action there.

Sir Brian Hayes, new perma-nentt secretary at the department, find the comparison with (the "Company") that in accordance with terms of the Indenture dated as of September 1, 1972 (the "Indenture") among the Company, Borden, Inc., as Guarantor (the "Guarantor"), the Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association, as Trustee, the Company has elected to redeem all of the outstanding Debentures on August 31, 1983 (the "Redemption Date") at a redemption price of 10114 % of the principal amount thereof phis accrued interest from September 1, 1982 to August 31, 1983. Paymeat of the redemption price and accrued interest, which will aggregate $1,062.36 for each $1,000 principal amount of Debentures, (the "Redemption Price"), will be made upon presentation and surrender of Debentures, together with the September 1, 1983 and all subsequent interest compons attached, at the option of the holder either (a) at Chibank, N.A., Receive and Deliver Department, 111 Wall Street, 5th Floor, New York, NY 10043, or (b) subject to any laws or regulations applicable New York, NY 10043, or (h) subject to any laws or regulations applicable thereto in the country of any such office, at the offices of the additional Paying and Conversion Agents set forth below.

On the Redemption Date the Redemption Price will become due and payable upon each Debenture. No interest will accrue on the Debentures on and after August 31, 1983.

CONVERSION OR SALE ALTERNATIVES

Debentureholders have, as alternatives to redemption, the right to sell their Debentures through usual brokerage facilities or, on or before the close of business on Angust 31, 1983 to convert such Debentures into Common Stock of the Guarantor. The right to convert the principal of the Debentures to be redeemed will terminate at the close of business on August 31, 1983.

at the price of $31.50 per share, resulting in a convenion rate of approximately 31.75 shares of Common Stock per $1,000 in principal amount of the Debentures. The Guarantor will pay a cash adjustment in United States dollars in lieu of fractional shares in accordance with Section 3.03 of the Indenture.

So long as the market price of the Common Stock exceeds $33.46 per share, the market value of the shares of Common Stock into which the Debentures are convertible is greater than the Redemption Price. On July 18, 1983, the closing price of the Guarantor's Common Stock on the New York Stock Exchange as reported by the Western Edition of the July 19, 1983 Wall Street Journal was $58.50 per share.

To convert Debentures to Common Stock, the Debentures, with the September 1, 1983 and all subsequent interest coupons attached, together with written notice of election executed by the holder that the bolder elects to convert such Debenture, and specifying the name or names in which the shares of stock deliverable upon conversion shall be registered, with the address(es) of the person(s) so named, must be delivered to either (a) the New York office of Citibank, N.A., mentioned in the first paragraph of this notice, or (b) subject to any laws or regulations applicable thereto in the country of any such office, to the offices of the additional Conversion Agents set forth below.

With Edgar, plus runner, scoring an admirable tenacious 84, 65 of them

after he bad returned from injury, and Hadlee making some more powerful blows, and Cairns pulling Edmonds twice in one for six, and Bracewell doing his stuff, New Zealand finished their first innings with a lead of 152.

Only twice before, against Endland, have they enjoyed such an advantage as that. They led by 171 runs on the first innings at Lord's in 1949 and by 298 runs, also at Lord'a in 1973.

England went in again on Saturday just before 2.30. Having been fortunate to survive Hadlee's splendid

After his first two overs at the start of England's secod innings. Hadlee, at nothing like his old pace, had already beaten the bat more often that England did in the last three hours of New Zealand's innings.

Botham's failure to strike the right length has been crucial. At his best he would have finished, as was once bis habit, with five or more inexpensive wicktes. As it was, England, with the ball likely to move off the seam, were obliged to use 45 overs of spin. Edmonds, on the whole, bowled pretty well. New Zealand, so far, have bowled one over of spin and yet, even with Hadlee still to take a wicket, they have pushed England to the brink of

The match with England was woo about a minute before the interval when Julius Akumu converted a short corner. England, who did more of the attacking in the first half, were a little unlucky not to have soored from two short corners. The general feeling in the England camp was that they just lost a game against a powerful and experienced side, and indeed might have won had the Kenyan umpire applied the advantage rule and allowed play to continue jostead of awarding & free hit on several occasions when England looked likely to score. On Saturday the Kenyans defeated London Indians 5-3 in a fast and exciting game at the same Brainder David, of Slough, who represented Kenya in the first World Cup in 1971.

Venture born of a PhD thesis

John Fielden turned to self-employ-ment to enable him to finish a PhD. thesis after his grant ran out last September. He now sees it as a way of supporting himself, while a company he and six friends have formed acts off the ground. He has no regrets so far about not joining the milk round.
"The idea of working for a large company never really appealed. I prefer the thought of working in a small unit, where J. know everybody and everything which is going on," he says.

Mr Fielden, who is 25, became interested in the application of modern colour computer graphics during work on radio maps for his PhD in radio astronomy at Cambridge: With the help of introductions from his course supervisor, he has since been able to supply graphics for TV programmes, mainly to BBC Bristol. The new company, Arcom Array Processors, has been formed to design and build its own fairly powerful computer to improve ics in other fields.

Already interest in the group's ideas for techniques to de-blur photographs has been expressed by several medical and defence organizations. By using the most up-to-date microprocessors the group (all Cambridge physics graduates) believe they can provide a quicker and cheaper service than any existing one. If they succeed in raising the £100,000-£200,000 capital which

To meet his existing freelance contracts, he is using spare time on the computer at the Institute of Astronomy at Cambridge, and a TV camera borrowed from the BBC. As an office he uses a corner of a small 400 sq ft "starter" factory unit which some other friends have leased from Cambridge City Council for their own micro-computer operation.

Reaching an arrangement with the Institute to use their computer outside normal hours was comparatively straightforward. But oego-tiations with the Science and Engineering Research Council, which owns the computer, were more protracted. Mr Fielden's advice to anyone thinking of following his example would be; do not expect quick returns; be prepared to exercise a fair degree of diplomacy; and make sure that you "can put something back into the

"Getting started is the difficult bit. You've got to get the contacts", he says. He is now reasonably confident, particularly since he has no mortgage or family, that he can continue to support himself for as long as is needed to build up the company. He has found fairly general social acceptance for what he is doing, although some of his counterparts at the University think it "a bit strange" and are also surprised that he can generate enough income to keep going. "Money is not that important to me", he says. "It would be nice if we made a lot but I doo't really mind

If we don't." The work is hard - e six or seven day week, 10 to 12 hours a day. At times it is also tedious, but Mr Fielden is enjoying the experience so far - he reckous variety in the tasks compensates for boredom. He does oot resent the long hours, or the absence of a break. There is no use going into something half-heartedly", he says. "There is too much to do".

Exams, the new growth industry

Public examinations ruin the early summer for many young people between the ages of 16 and 22. Some have to contend with traditional three-hour papers while suffering from hay fever, heat waves or frunderstorms frequently affect the atmosphere in which students attempt to regargitate acquired knowledge, express ideas or solve problems for which they have been preparing for two or three years. Teachers some-times accuse parents of overemphasizing the need for their children to obtain GCE passes in order to qualify for entry to further education and careers. There is a detectable groundswell of opinion against the system of external examinations on which eenagers' futures so often depend. Many adults pursue successful careers in business or public life despite a record of failure at school; they claim correctly that qualities of personality and character are often more important for success and job satisfaction than paper qualifications. Teachers point to the possible harm done to less academically able pupils by a system which appears to overreward certain intellectual capacities. A school's good record in helping pupils to achieve examination successes may be more attributable to good teaching than to particular effort on the youngsters' part.

Catherine Avent assesses their importance - and qualities that go untested examinations but they are not likely to disappear even if those appropriate to school pupils are as radically altered in the future as they were when single-subject GCE and CSE replaced the grouped-subject school certificate with which older folk are familiar. Multiple-choice answer sheets may replace many essay-type questions but are not necessarily less traumatic as tests of acquired knowledge, nor is a system of continuous assessment preferable to all college students rather than the traditional end-of-course examination.

Those who deplore the influence of examinations upon the curriculum and the unsuccessful candidates have to counter the argument that at professional level it is vital for the public to be assured of a practitioner's competence by the certification which has been conducted by senior members of that profession. Patients take their doctor's prescription to a pharmacist confident that both practitioners have been properly trained, just as they trust their solicitor to know their legal rights or an architect to design a house which will not fall down. change the structure and method of Exams are a growth industry in that a greater proportion of the population nowadays sits them. The driving test is nearly universal. More pupils take examinations at school since the school-leaving age was raised and more go on to further and higher education. Parallel with its expansion has gone the establishment of new professions as a result of technological innovatioo and the increasing com-plexity of modern society. Examinations provide a sieve for educational opportunity from ooc stage to the next and a means whereby employers can redoce the number of candidates for interview when they have hundreds of applicants for some vacancies.

Some occupations impose examinations as a coodition for career progression or specialization. Merchant Navy officers have their competency assessed at each stage before assuming command of a ship; the armed services set examinations for entry to staff colleges; miners' promotion depends upon e series of assessments.

Since examinations play so large a part in entry to some careers, young people who have difficulty in coping with GCE/CSE should perhaps consider occupations which do not restrict entry to the possessors of certain certificates and where career success and job satisfaction depend more upon qualities of character and

Jenkin to reveal new council spending curbs

By David Walker, Local Government Correspondent The Government will an- their rates are controlled in Whitehall responsible for all and every council.

councils, including the Greater numbers in the Lords. London Council, and the Inner overshooting of spending targets. At present, the Government can penalize high-spending fest pledges on capping the councils by taking away rate support grant but since it cannot control their rates it is whether the Government will powerless to control spending.

Mr Jenkin will be able to decide that a council's spending is "excessive" and limit any rate rise. The new powers will come into effect in April. 1985. Government business managers have scheduled the introduction of a Bill based on the White Paper for January

Later today Mr Jenkin will give English councils a figure for approved spending in 1984-85. He will warn them that 85. He will warn them that be rejected by the Association of performance in meeting these targets will determine whether the GLC.

nounce today what it promises is a solution to high rates and excess council speoding.

In what councils see as a major constitutional change which will eventually make edict limiting the rates of each

Whitehall responsible for all local government, the Government is taking over the power to set council rates and so control their spending.

The White Paper will explain how whal Mr Patrick Jenkin. Secretary of State for the Environment, calls the "primary targets" are to be selected. These are the Labour city councils, including the Greater and every council.

Although the councils are not wholly in opposition, a formidable lobbying campaign has been launched. Most worrying for the Government is the strength of opinion within the conservative Association of County Councils, which can muster backbench support in the Commons and impressive numbers in the Lords.

Mr John Lovill, the associ London Education Authority, ation chairman, told The Times held mainly responsible for the that he and the other shire county leaders, while remaining enthusiastic supporters of the Government, reject the mani> whether the Government will try to woo shire counties. Many counties acknowledge that they could, if their arms were twisted, trim small amounts off their budgets for 1984-85.

Letter from Atlanta

Southern comfort for the people's prophet

All heads turned to the back of the ball and there he was, wreathed in light, the most exciting man in American politics. He strode forward as an electric organ blasted a an electric organ biasted a fanfare and pretty womeo in Sunday best stood on chairs for a better view. Every speaker at the rally had been saying that history was being made here in Atlanta; and with the arrival of the hero not a soul in that experant doubted it.

Six feet tall, lean, monstachioed, dressed in a dark three-piece, with a striped tie, the Rev Jesse Jackson bounded on to the stage as the chairman was saying "he not only looks like a president. He walks like a president." wards like a president words which detonated a fresh explosion of cheering and made the organist plunge his hands in the keys and wring out a chord of frenzied accountable. acclamation.

Asinger poured out a long gospel song while the audience swayed to the rhythm, and a preacher enumerated Mr Jackson's qualities ("the vision of an eagle, the industry of a beaver") while the crowd called out "yessir" and "right

And with the atmosphere electric with anticipation lie summoned Mr Jackson to speak introducing him simply as a propher of God.

Mr Jackson is a phenomenon. He has picked up the Torch of his teacher. Martin Luther King, and is leading a resurgence of the black spirit. He has fired blacks with the audacious idea that a black, perhaps te great-grandchild of slaves, can aspire to the presidency of the United States. He has thus made whites ponder, and has put pepper into the presidential preliminaries.

He has never said that he will run for the Democratic nomination; nor has he said that he will not. The speculation is part of the excite-ment. But many blacks now wear "Jesse Jackson for President" badges. And here in Atlanta, premier city of Dixie, there began the insistent chanting of his admirers: "Run, Jesse, run".

As he rides the wave of his communication began to be like the wave of his communication and the beginning of the second secon

Mr Jackkson was in peak form, constantly bringing the 2,000 crowd to their feet. This said simply that blacks, nearly an eighth of the population, want their share of the American dream.

"We die in war together. We pay taxes together. Now we want to share power together. Blacks will not settle for being the Harlem Globetrotters of the Democratic Party. Hands that picked cotton in 64 will pick the President in 84."

He urged hlacks to get elected as sheriffs, judges. congressmen and mavors. to make up the power-sharing

Run for the courthouse. Run for the statehouse. Run for the White House. But "Run. run, run," chanted the delirious crowd as the organist pounded chords.

It was a very long speech but Mr Jackson had the people with him. Now he abondoned his prepared text and flew into evangelical fervour. The air was charged and Mr Jackson was all preacher, gasping for breath, his throat raspning. "From outhouse to White House, Our time has come." he cried, and hands reached out to him as, amidst the roar of ovation, he fell, drained, into the arms and embraces of his friends.

Mr Jackson was with Martin Luther King when that here was murdered in Memphis, an event blacks call the crucifixion. Now 42, Mr Jackson is a catalyst in the movement to get blacks registered as voters and to fight the obstacles and gerrymandering which still disfranchize many of them. He is the president of PUSH (People United to Serve Humanity) and PUSH's annual convention in Atlantis last week has been in his long southern crusade to raise black political

Mr Jackson is a charismatic activist and campaigner with no experience of political office. He could not get the nomination, but his point is that blacks need a revival of pride and he sees himself spearheading a movement to get more blacks into office. The Sunday Times reopened the corporal punishment debate. Under the heading "forward to the cane mutiny," it said it gave the impression of teachers appearing to leach exactly what they ought not to teach: that problems are settled by violence. "Since Ministers must legislate, let them legislate to end the whole peruicious nonesense and ban the cane for good," it added.

The Observer agreed, saying "Britain's children are to remain the nuly group of people in Europe who can be assaulted with impunity. There is some evidence that it does mpression of teachers appearing to
